

November 22, 2016

To whom it may concern,

My name is Katie Lee, I have known Scott Guttenberger for about 4 1/2 years I count him as one of my closest friends. I have watched him change over the years. When he was with my other friend Amy Johnson he was amazing with her, they cared a lot about each other and it was overall great relationship. But when I saw him with Britney Deane he was less confident in himself, more timid and towards the end almost scared to do anything because of the way she treated him and how demining the things were that she was saying to him.

Britney put him through a lot of things that no one should have to go through in a relationship when you love someone. Even the way that her sister treated him claiming false accusations against him, he still stood by Britney in hopes that they could work it out. He was always kind to her with the things he said and the things he did, he always tried to show her he cared. She treated him like an obligation or an irritation. Even the way that she treated him on social media flaunting that she was out with other guys.

It really bothered me to see Scott so upset because he cared about her. He tried everything, thinking it was him even to the extent of seeing a counselor in hopes that he could make it work. Scott is an amazing person he cares about everyone in his life. He comes over to my house for family functions and has a blast with everybody there including my children.

I was a sergeant in the Marine Corps for four years and with my tours in Iraq I know what bad people look like, and I know Scott is not one of them nor has he ever been. I have never once seen him violent or even raise his voice to someone in anger. Everything that they are saying about him is defamation of character. They are doing this to hide the truth about themselves so the world doesn't know that they are really the horrible people.

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be 'Katie Lee', enclosed within a large, loopy oval scribble.

Katie Lee

303.916.8859